

REVIEW MICROLEARNING CONFERENCE 2008

Microlearning2008 is over, bringing for the 4th time global thinkers and practitioners to Innsbruck to discuss the dramatic shift towards microinformation that is hitting the worlds of corporate learning & knowledge management, of educational institutions, and of informal and personal self-learning.

Over the years the Microlearning conferences have grown to go beyond "normal conferences". We seem to really have found a format now that combines the best of both worlds: On the one hand a tight schedule to get to know as many persons, ideas and valuable experiences as possible, and on the other hand our self-developed interactive formats combining elements of "speedgeeking" and "World Cafe".

Again it was a casual, nearly intimate experience. More like an intensive time for enthusiastic discussion with friends, no empty time listening (or not really listening) to frontal speeches from too much spatial and psychological distance. And again it was a fascinating experience, how global and regional perspectives, corporate and educational interests just came together to form a whole.

A big "thank you!" to all the participants! It was fun to see that there really is no clear borderline between presentators and auditory at the Microlearning conferences. You all were key participants, and we are really glad to have you here in Innsbruck!

Here are live recordings of the brilliant keynote presentations of Teemu Arina and Judy Breck:

Teemu Arina: Innovation and Microinformation
<http://www.vimeo.com/1254531>

Judy Breck: Cloud Education
<http://www.vimeo.com/1254106>

We start now the planning for Microlearning conference 2009 and hope to welcome you again next year in Innsbruck!

Please stay in touch and visit: <http://www.microlearning.org>